ABOUT US

Easy Read

We want to make recovery reality. We have been finding new ways to support people and fighting for social inclusion for more than 55 years.

We believe each person is unique and should have the chance to take control of their life and find new meanings and purposes.

We focus on the person and their needs, choices and hopes rather than on medical conditions or labels.

We work with people as equal partners to design, plan and provide support together.

We are helping more people who have many difficulties in their lives.

They may have mental health problems but they may also be living with drug misuse, social isolation, homelessness, abusive relationships, poor job hopes or poor education.

Our practical and flexible services and our positive and helpful attitude means we are able to adapt our support to meet a person's needs.

We provide:

Supported living schemes

Community wellbeing support services
